

Enterprise Architecture Enhancements Case Study

Client:

Energy Distribution Company

Time Frame:

October 2016 - June 2017

Area of Expertise:

Enterprise architecture

Responsible for:

Enterprise architecture repository

Challenge

The client, a leading energy distribution company, was experiencing various challenges in managing their enterprise architecture assets. Not only was the process problematic when collecting data, it was also difficult to manage and share the architecture assets to the relevant stakeholders. As a result, it was creating significant issues in the architecture governance process and project solution design.

Approach

The team at Chrysalis worked closely with the client to identify the issues and challenges relating to the enterprise architecture and solution design process. As a result, we developed a functional and seamless process that was capable of capturing and updating all architectural changes. Complementing this, we implemented a new architecture repository tool that provided a portal-based interface, allowing for easy access and navigation of all architectural assets.

Outcomes and Benefits

Our consultants were not only able to improve enterprise architecture governance, they also significantly reduced the effort and cost in managing the enterprise architecture assets; much to our clients delight. With the new systems in place, the ease of access to the current state architecture significantly improved, therefore reducing the effort and cost for impact assessment and solution design.
